Howdy Ags!

When I came out of the tunnel for the Texas Bowl I already knew that our numbers would be down with transfers and opt-outs. But as I watched us warm up, I was still pretty shocked by the number of unfamiliar faces going through first and second-team drills. In bowl games, it's always customary for there to be walk-ons wearing jerseys and warm-up pants to stand on the sideline, but in this game, every Aggie available was suited up in full gear.

When Jaylen Henderson walked past me after our first offensive play from scrimmage with the doctors holding his arm in an air cast, I knew we were in trouble. Though our guys gave it their all and fought to the end and I was super proud of them.

In the short time after Mike Elko arrived, he went to work. He had to build relationships with verbal commits, existing players, and potential recruits and at the same time research and build a new staff. Before the bowl game, Elko began a new tradition at A&M, tweeting out a Johnny Manziel GIF with a Gig'em and lock every time he got a new commitment. This became very popular for Aggies as they saw our new coach building a new foundation. There were six of these tweets before signing day. Then the Aggies signed 14 players on Early Signing Day.

After seeing our numbers on the field, I was still a bit concerned about what we would do next fall after all of the transfers and potential opt-outs. But Mike Elko showed that blue-collar hard-working style that we expected and the tweets kept coming. Seventeen more times we got to see the new GIF pop up, showing one after another after another commit, until Elko had moved to the number two transfer portal class in the nation.

I can't wait for the spring when Elko installs his defense and Coach Klein installs his offense, they will start developing these guys into SEC-caliber players. The lunchbox, "hold everyone accountable" philosophy is exactly what we need.

The Maroon & White game is scheduled for April 20, 2024, when we get a first look at the new Aggie football team. I can't wait!

Gig'em!

NBA LEGEND

NBA legend Scottie Pippen welcomes the players and coaches leaving the floor after the big upset win over Kentucky with a huge smile. The six-time world champion who was named one of the "50 Greatest Players in NBA History" attended the game with his son Justin, who has been offered a basketball scholarship by Texas A&M. The Pippens had plenty to smile about as the men beat the #6 Wildcats 97-92 in overtime. Photo by Rob Havens '88

SAW 'EM OFF

Women's basketball head coach Joni Taylor celebrates the biggest win of her coaching career in Aggieland with her players as they Saw 'Em Off after the game. The Aggies dominated the Tennessee Volunteers, winning 71-56. The Vols program has made 18 Final Four appearances and won eight national championships. The current team carried a six-game winning streak coming into Reed Arena. Photo by Rob Havens '88

TOUCHDOWN

True freshman and fourth-string quarterback Marcel Reed high steps into the end zone after a 20-yard scurry around the end to claim the first rushing touchdown of his Aggie career. Thrust into service after starting quarterback Jaylen Henderson was injured on the first play of the Texas Bowl, Reed was ready to show what he could do. The talented kid out of Nashville's Montgomery Bell Academy completed 61% of his passes for 361 yards. Although we ran out of time, Reed showed he is ready to compete for playing time next season. MEN'S BASKETBALL

Currently the Aggies are 3-3 in conference play with big wins over No. 6 Kentucky at Reed Arena, and a gutsy win on the road against LSU. Buzz and the boys battled through one of the toughest non-conference schedules in the country and are now in the middle of the pack in the SEC standings. The overtime win over #6 Kentucky was the first for Buzz Williams, and the Aggies played one of their best games of the year against the talented Blue Blood program. After a disappointing loss to LSU at home, the Aggies got some revenge in a big win at Baton Rouge.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

The Aggies went 12-1 during the non-conference portion of their schedule and are currently 3-3 in the SEC. They have big wins over Tennessee at Reed and their first conference road victory in the Joni Taylor era at Missouri. The Aggies dominated the Volunteers 71-56, letting everyone know that this team is much improved over last year's squad. After a tough loss to #1 South Carolina, the ladies bounced back on the road for a tough 69-67 victory over the Missouri Tigers.

INDOOR TRACK & FIELD

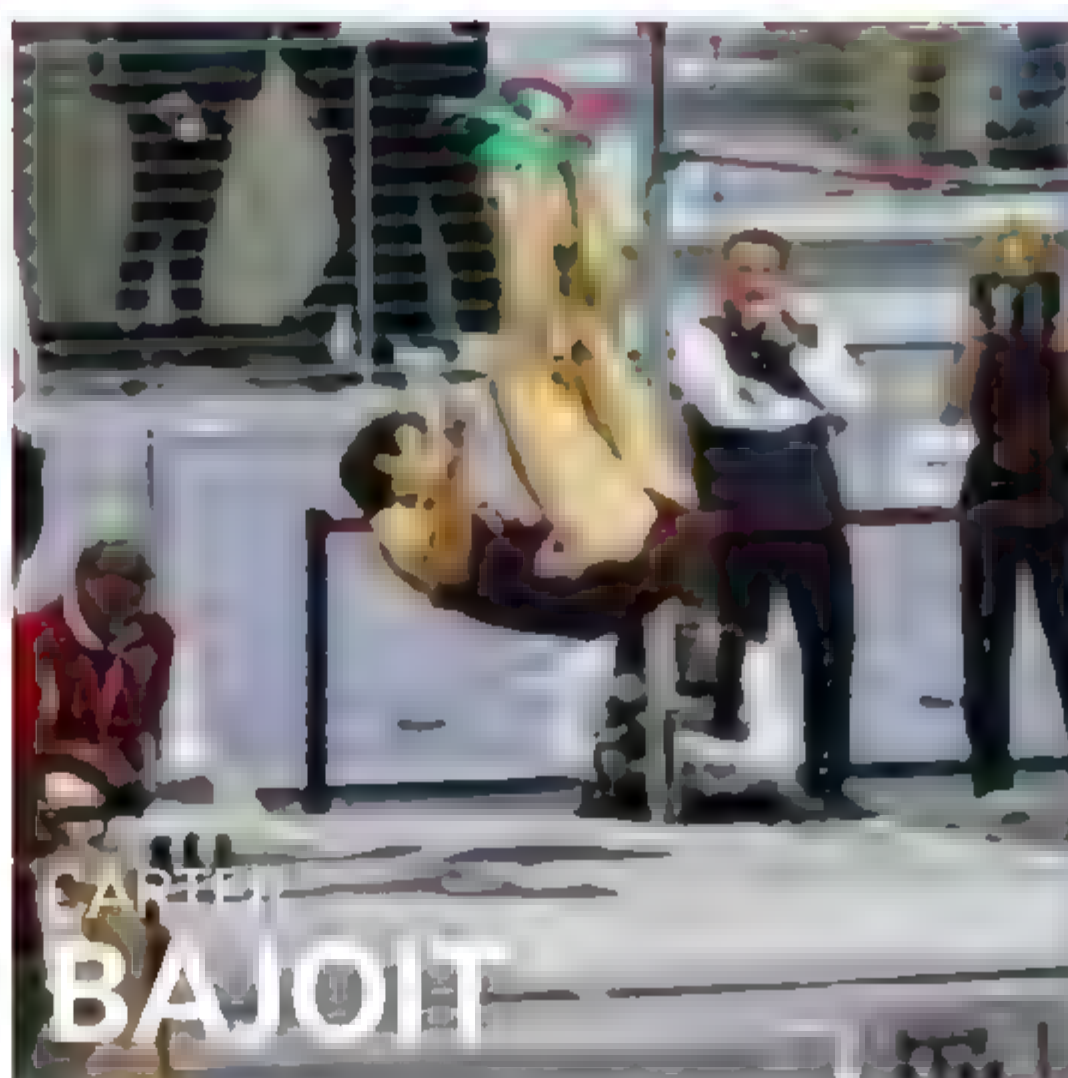

Texas A&M opened the brand new R.A. 'Murray' Fasken '38 Indoor Track & Field facility on January 13th. The 130,000-square-foot stadium was designed and built with the capability of hosting conference, national and international competitions. The indoor facility can seat up to 4,000—all of which are elevated above ground level surrounding the entire track. The Aggies are already set to host the 2025 SEC Indoor Track & Field Championships. On the opening weekend, the Aggies won six events and set seven Aggie All-Time Top-12 performer marks.

TRANSFERS & OPT-OUTS

WON'T EXTINGUISH THE AGGIE SPIRIT TO FIGHT TO THE END

BY ROB HAVENS '88

College Football is not the same as it was five years ago. The transfer portal and NIL have made it into a professional sport where student-athletes have the power to move from school to school in search of the most lucrative financial deal they can get. Recruiting sites even give a dollar value on what it will take to sign a football player to your team. The new system has little to no rules and with no clear path in the future, the game as we knew it will exist no longer.

Beginning next season the College Football Playoff will expand to twelve teams. It will be interesting to see how bowl games will be affected by the expansion. Over the last few years the advent of the "Opt Out" has had a huge impact on the games. A few years ago, there were only a few of the games' best that would skip the bowl game to prevent themselves from getting an injury that might affect their draft stock. Now the "Opt Out" happens everywhere and players who have no chance of a long NFL career are quitting on their teams and the bowl games have become glorified scrimmages.

The portal has made it even worse! Now players are opting out or entering the portal to test the waters and see how much money they can make. In many cases, players will make more money playing college ball than they will ever make playing in the NFL. High school players recruiting visits used to be about where would be the best place to get a great education and set them up for the rest of their lives. Now it's all about where they can make the most money. Existing players also see new kids making more than them after the blood, sweat, and tears they have already poured out and decide to see how much they can get on the open market.

The portal was created to give kids who were buried on a depth chart the opportunity to play somewhere else. But now even starters that are having great success are testing the waters to see how much money they can make. A great example of the proper use of the portal would be Haynes King. A talented kid who did his best and fought through injuries, but knew based on the players we already had that it was best to move on. He found a landing spot at Georgia Tech and has found great success.

Unfortunately, too many players have been short-sighted and let the desire to make a quick buck affect their outlook on what a degree and three or four years at one school can do for them. As a result, the portal is full of kids looking to land at a place that is offering the most money.

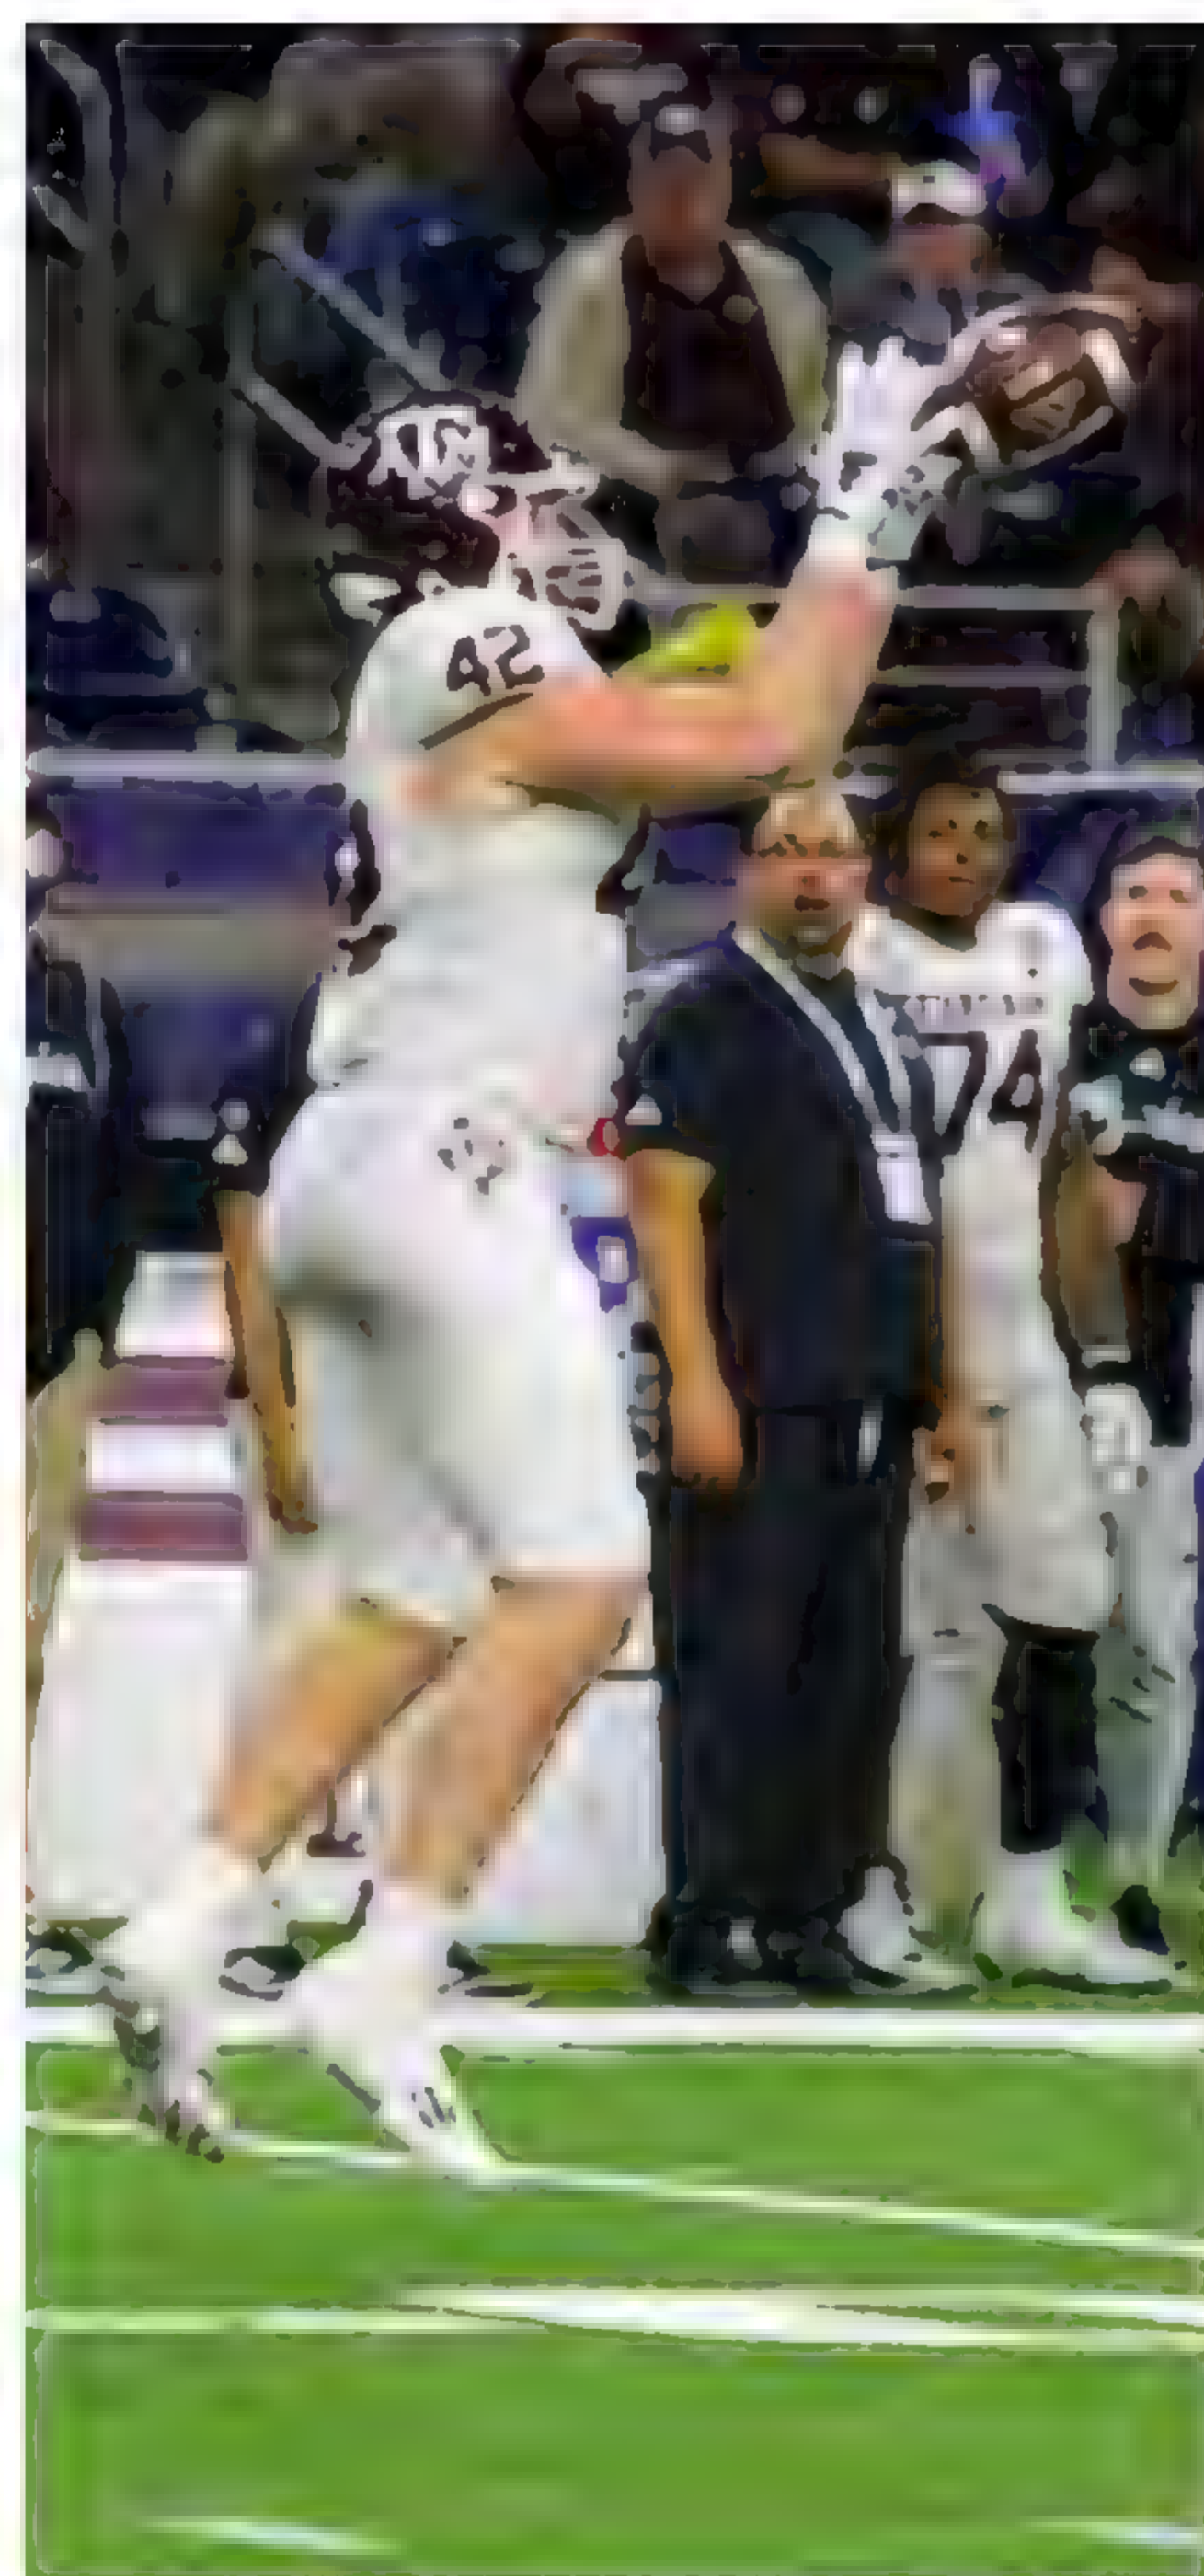

Coaches can't speak out on what they think because they fear the repercussions of alienating their players or potential new players by saying the system is "flawed." As a result, you have guys like Lane Kiffin who talked trash about our program buying all of its players and now he is leading the pack in buying the best players in the portal, including Walter Nolen.

As a result of the portal, NIL, and injuries, the Aggies had to play the Texas Bowl without 31 scholarship players. On the bright side, we got to see some young guys get some significant playing time. The Aggies had six new starters on defense. Holes in our secondary allowed our 12th Man Sam Mathews to start and show what he could do at safety. He answered the bell with a team-high 14 tackles and an interception.

Our third-string quarterback, Jaylen Henderson, who started the game after the early season injury to Conner Weigman and the transfer by second-string quarterback Max Johnson, was injured on the first play. Our fourth-string quarterback, Marcel Reed, came in and played his heart out allowing the Aggies a chance to win the game late.

One thing that the portal and NIL have shown is the greatness of those who stayed and gave it all like graduate Max Wright. "Texas A&M to me is the perfect representation of what it means to be people of honor and character," he explained "It's the best university in the world, and there is no other university like it. I will be an Aggie for the rest of my life."

As Mike Elko begins the rebuilding process, my advice is that he fills our team with hard-working men who have great character and hearts just like Max Wright. He showed what the Aggie Spirit is all about. Money will come and go, but being an Aggie is much more than collecting a big check. The Aggies fell short in their final game of 2023, but the heart and the fight we showed made us all very proud. ■

The deck was stacked against the Aggies going into the Texas Bowl, nevertheless the Aggies fought to the end and came up just short falling 31-23. The game was the end of one era and the start of a new one under Coach Mike Elko.

After the firing of Jimbo Fisher, there were plenty of questions moving forward. Who would be the next coach? What players would transfer and who would play in the bowl?

On the bright side the Aggies got their guy and all of Aggieland could celebrate the hiring of Mike Elko. Yet there was still plenty of uncertainty as players jockeyed for position in an ever-changing landscape of college football. Walter Nolen, Evan Stewart, and Max Johnson were a few of the first players to pull the plug and look for another landing spot. Edgerin Cooper announced he was opting out and preparing for the NFL.

By the time the players took the field, the Aggies were down to less than 50 scholarship players. Interim Coach Elijah Robinson said they were not opting out of the bowl game and as long as they had eleven players they were going to play.

You had to have a roster card to look up the names of the players as they warmed up on the field and ran through first and second-team drills. Fortunately, the Aggies knew they would be without Max Johnson and that gave Jalen Henderson and Marcel Reed a month to get reps with the receivers who did plan to play.

Unfortunately, on the first play from scrimmage for the Aggies, Henderson was tackled after releasing a pass and suffered an injury that would knock him out of the game. True Freshman Marcel Reed would come in and play his heart out and gave the Aggies a chance to win.

Reed completed 20 of 33 passes for 361 yards. He also showed off his running skills adding another 29 yards on the ground and a huge touchdown for the Aggies. Jahdae Walker had an outstanding game with eight catches for 137 yards. Playing in his final game for the Aggies, Max Wright had four catches for 62 yards. Moose Muhammad III had a spectacular one-handed grab during the contest and added two more catches during the game.

On a day that fans needed a program to keep up with who our players on the field were, there was no doubt who No. 12 was as he earned his first start in the defensive backfield in his Aggie career. Sam Mathews had the game of his life with a career-high 14 tackles and an interception. Tweeting after the game "All I needed was a shot!" He showed everyone how talented he was and how big his heart is.

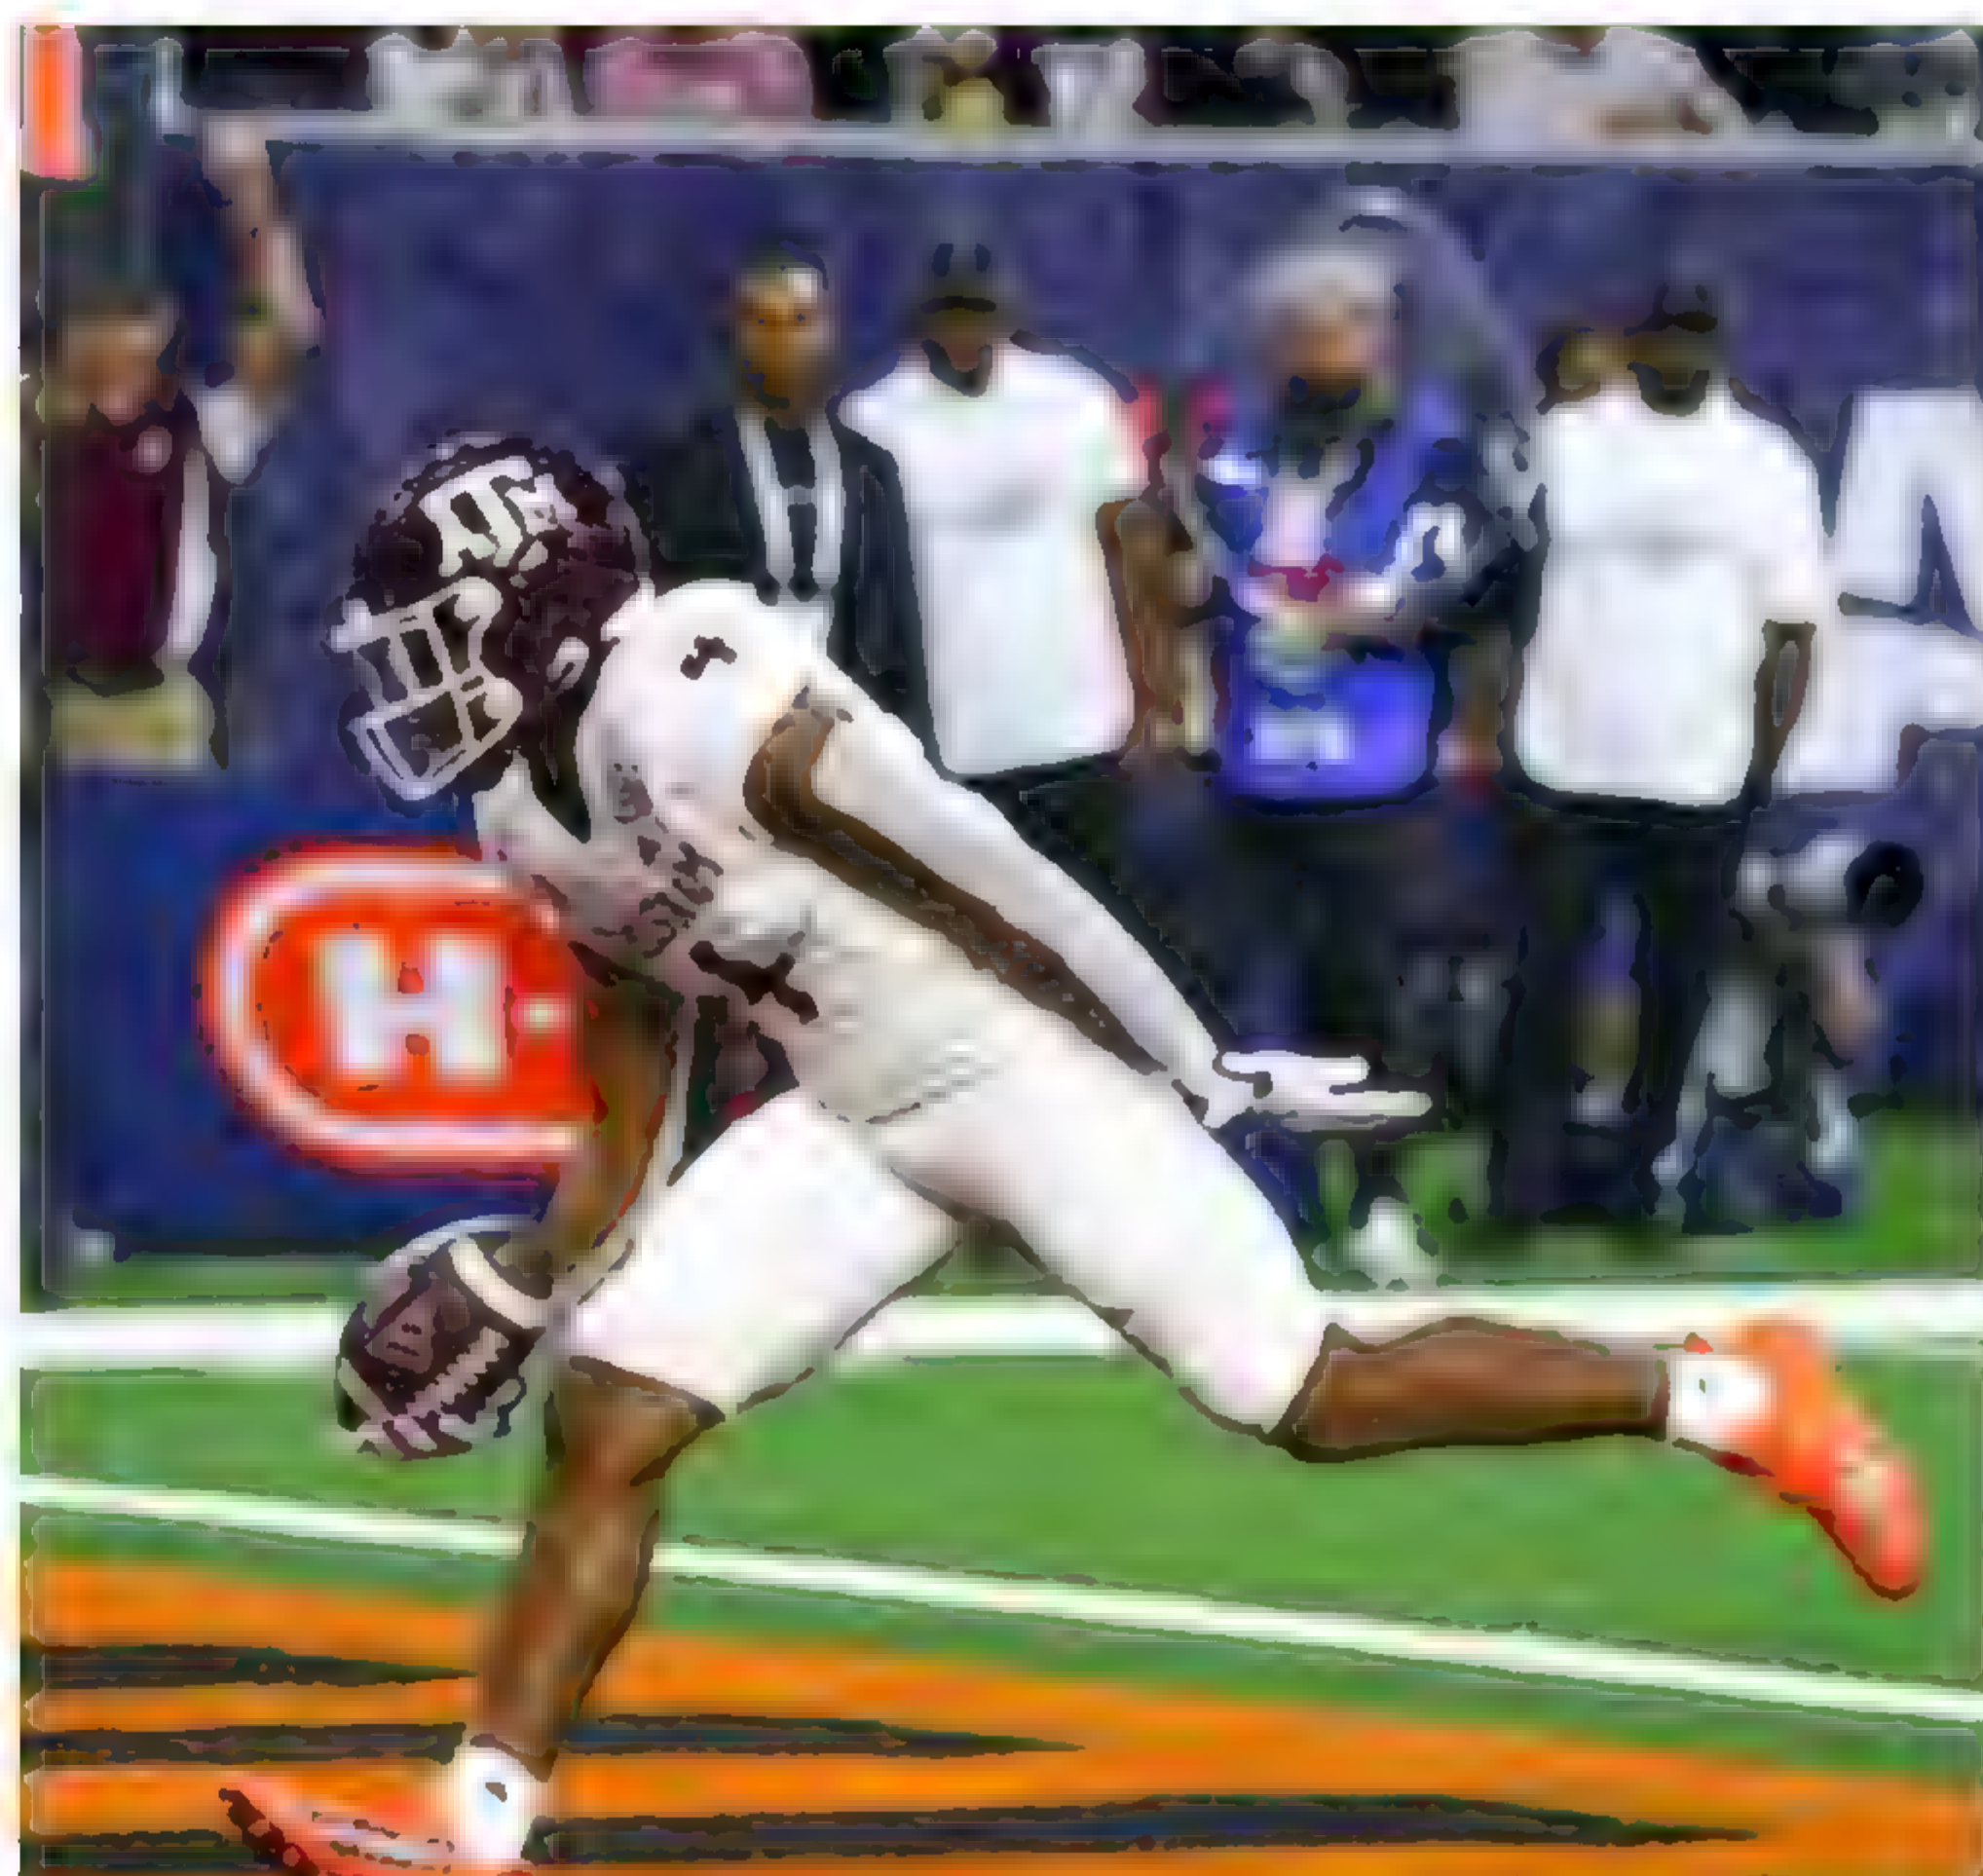

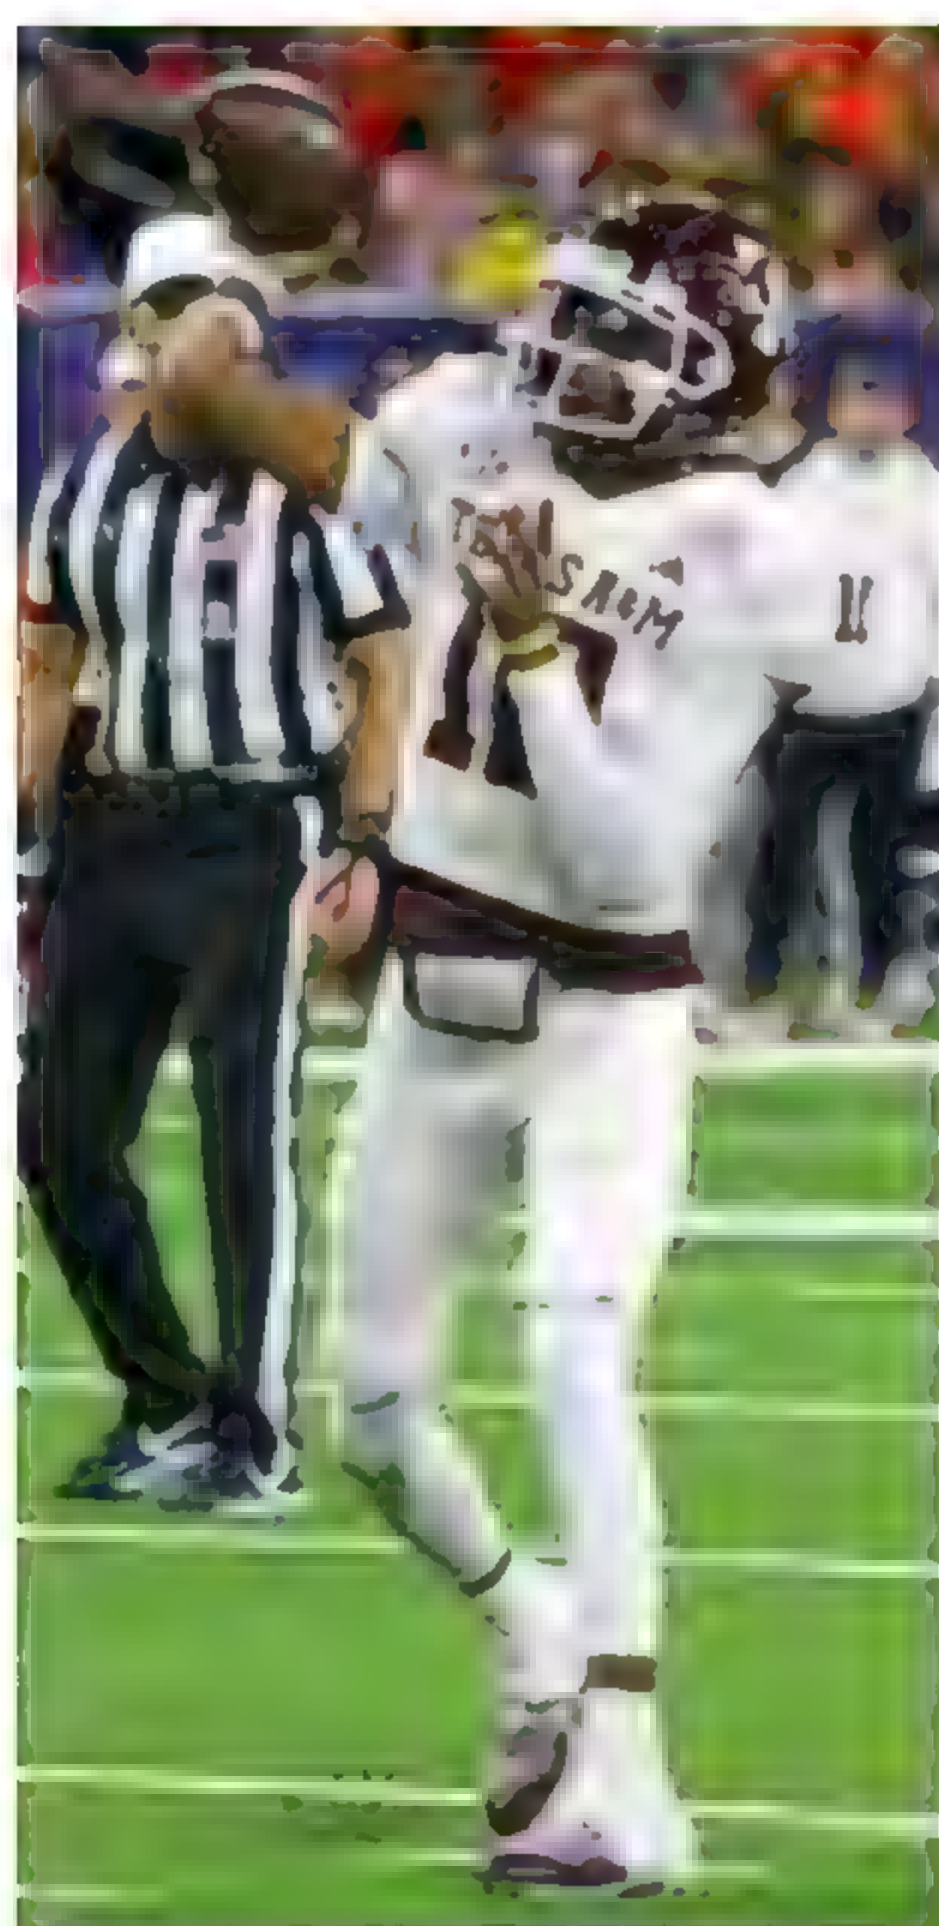

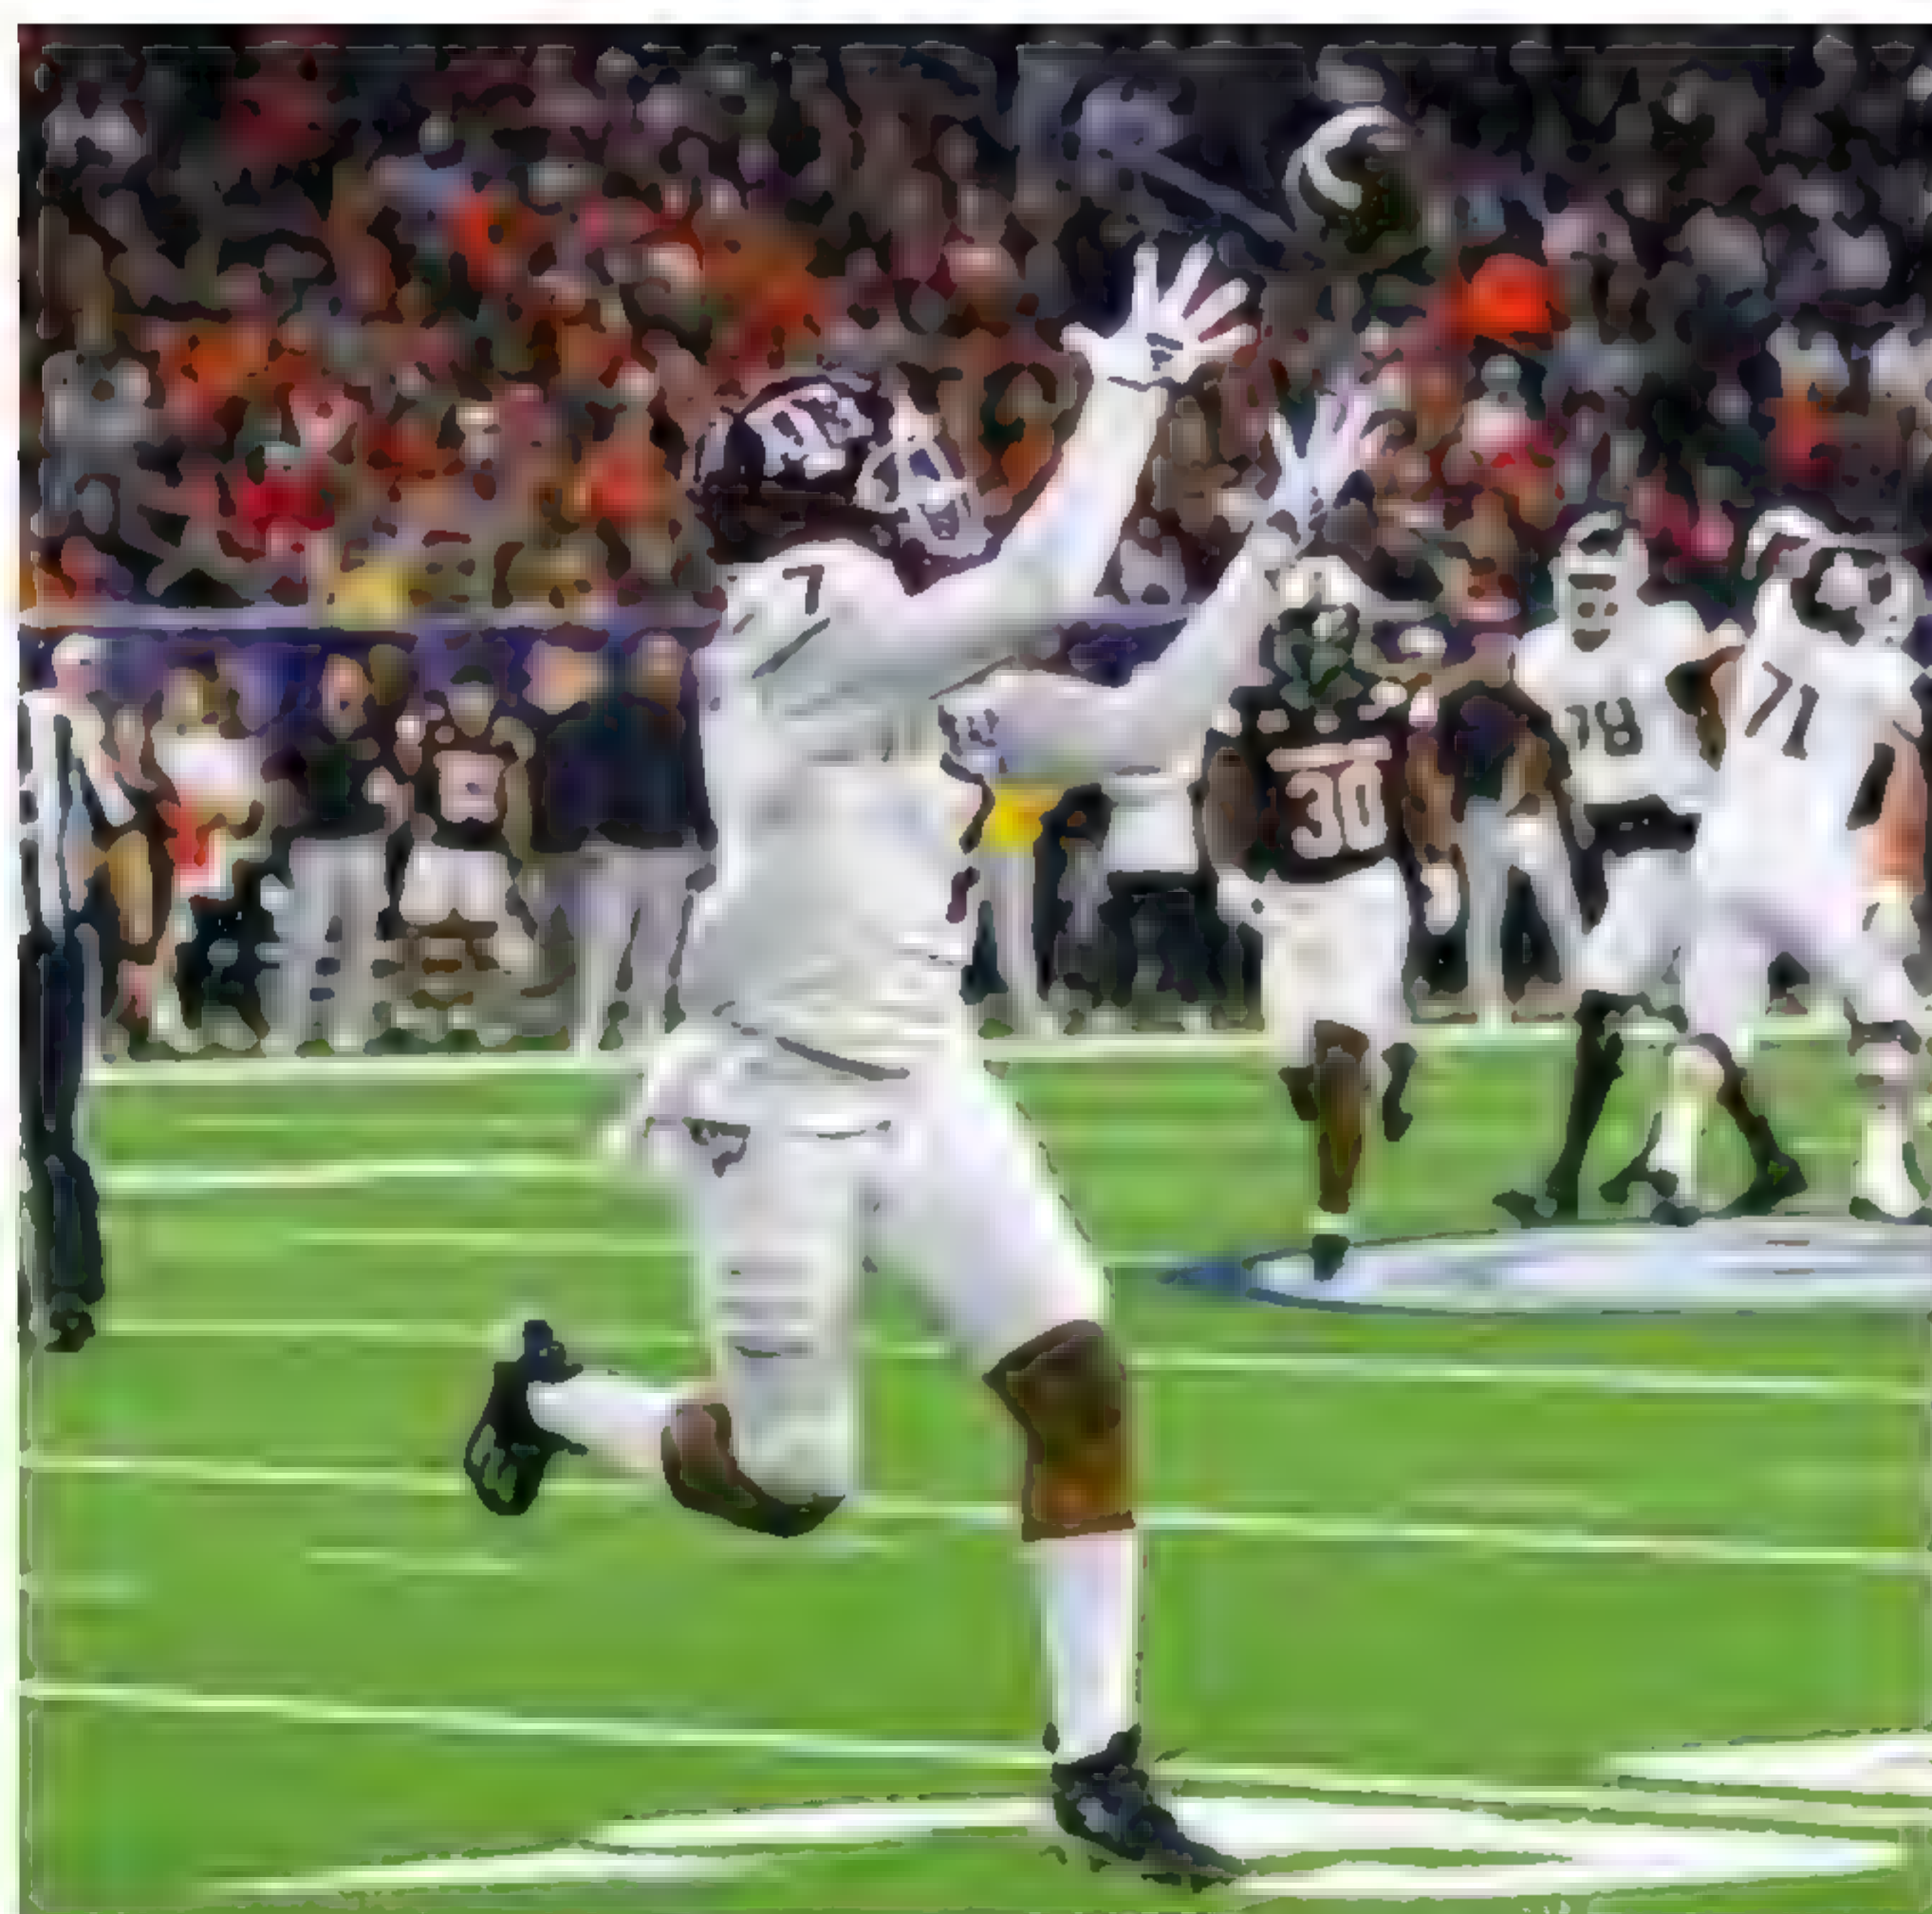

The Aggies trailed 24-6 at the half, as they had to settle for two Randy Bond field goals. On the other hand, Dalton Brooks got his first career interception to start the second half and the Aggies took advantage by driving the ball 60 yards and Amari Daniels capped off the drive with the Aggies' first touchdown.

Marcel Reed scored his first career rushing touchdown on a 20-yard scamper that drew the Aggies within nine 31-20 in the third quarter. However, a fumble deep inside the Cowboys' territory in the fourth quarter would prove costly as the Aggies looked to get back into the game.

Randy Bond kicked a 51-yard field goal that bounced off the crossbar and through to get us within eight points, but a desperation pass to the goal line as time expired was intercepted and the game ended with a score of 31-23.

The Aggies gave it their all and fought to the end but it wasn't enough. The game allowed several of our players who have played behind starters to show what they could do and gain valuable experience. As the clock went to zeros it was the end of one chapter, yet it is also the beginning of a new chapter and with Mike Elko at the helm the future looks bright. ■

POLO CLUB

BY ROB HAVENS '88

One of the best parts about our sport clubs is that not only do they give students a chance to compete at the highest level, but they also allow student-athletes to learn how to run an organization. When we reached out to Yada van Noort to ask about the Polo Club, not only did we get great information about the club, but we found out how beneficial joining the club and becoming an officer has been in her life.

The Polo club was founded in 1967, but they got their home arena in 2016 to house and operate their own horses. The club is thriving with both experienced and novice members who compete in competitions under the United States Polo Association. In fact, the women's team traveled to Virginia last year and won the 2023 Women's National Championship.

Even though the team has reached the pinnacle of the Polo world, they are still welcoming new members that have little to no experience. Van Noort said, "I am actually among one of the people who joined the club without any prior polo experience, so I am not on our competitive team. I did have 8 years of English riding experience prior to joining, so I have been mostly learning about game strategy and getting better at hitting the ball during my time here. My favorite thing about being an officer of the Polo Club is getting to teach new members how to ride and the basics of playing polo."

Van Noort was a general member as a freshman but became the treasurer for the club in her second year. She was secretary last season and is the president of the club this year. She told us, "My favorite thing about being president is having a fantastic officer team to back me up and working with our club members and competitive team members to continue to grow the club and leave it even better than we found it."

According to van Noort, the vast majority of their members had no polo experience before joining the club. Some of them didn't even know how to ride a horse before joining! The club hosts an Open Ride event on the second week of each semester. For just $5, students and staff can visit the barn and ride one of the horses and get a taste of what the club has to offer. Van Noort said, "Most people join because they realize how much fun it is to ride and play on our horses, and they stay because of the friendly atmosphere we work hard to foster around the barn."

The Polo Club is a perfect example of how our student-athletes can compete at the highest level and at the same time give student-athletes like van Noort invaluable experience on how to run a successful organization.

BASEBALL CLUB

BY ROB HAVENS '88

It is springtime in Aggieland and that means the start of Aggie Baseball. However, the men taking the field at Blue Bell Park are not the only ones suited up in maroon and white to play on the diamond this spring. The Texas A&M club baseball team, which started in 2001, will be competing as well for the school we love so well.

Our club team plays in the National Club Baseball Association. The Aggies are in a conference made up of the University of Texas, Texas State, Stephen F. Austin, and Baylor University. The team has gone undefeated in conference play the last two years. When you win your conference, you advance to play in the regional championship. The Aggies play in the Gulf Coast Region. If you win the regional tournament, you get to play in the World Series, which is comprised of the eight regional winners.

President Wes Conquest explained, "Since I've been on the team (last 3 years), we have dominated Texas, lost to LSU in the regional tournament every year and had some very heated games with SMU." We asked him why he joined the team and he said, "I joined the club because I really missed the game of baseball. It has been my passion and stress relief for my entire life. I now I get to represent Texas A&M while playing the game I love."

The team practices every Tuesday and Thursday, but the players hit and lift on their own during the week. There are between 20-25 members and the team is very competitive; all the players have prior varsity or collegiate baseball experience. Conquest said, "Members join the club for various reasons, including a love for baseball, the desire to continue playing competitively at the collegiate level, building friendships with like-minded individuals, and representing Texas A&M in the sports community."

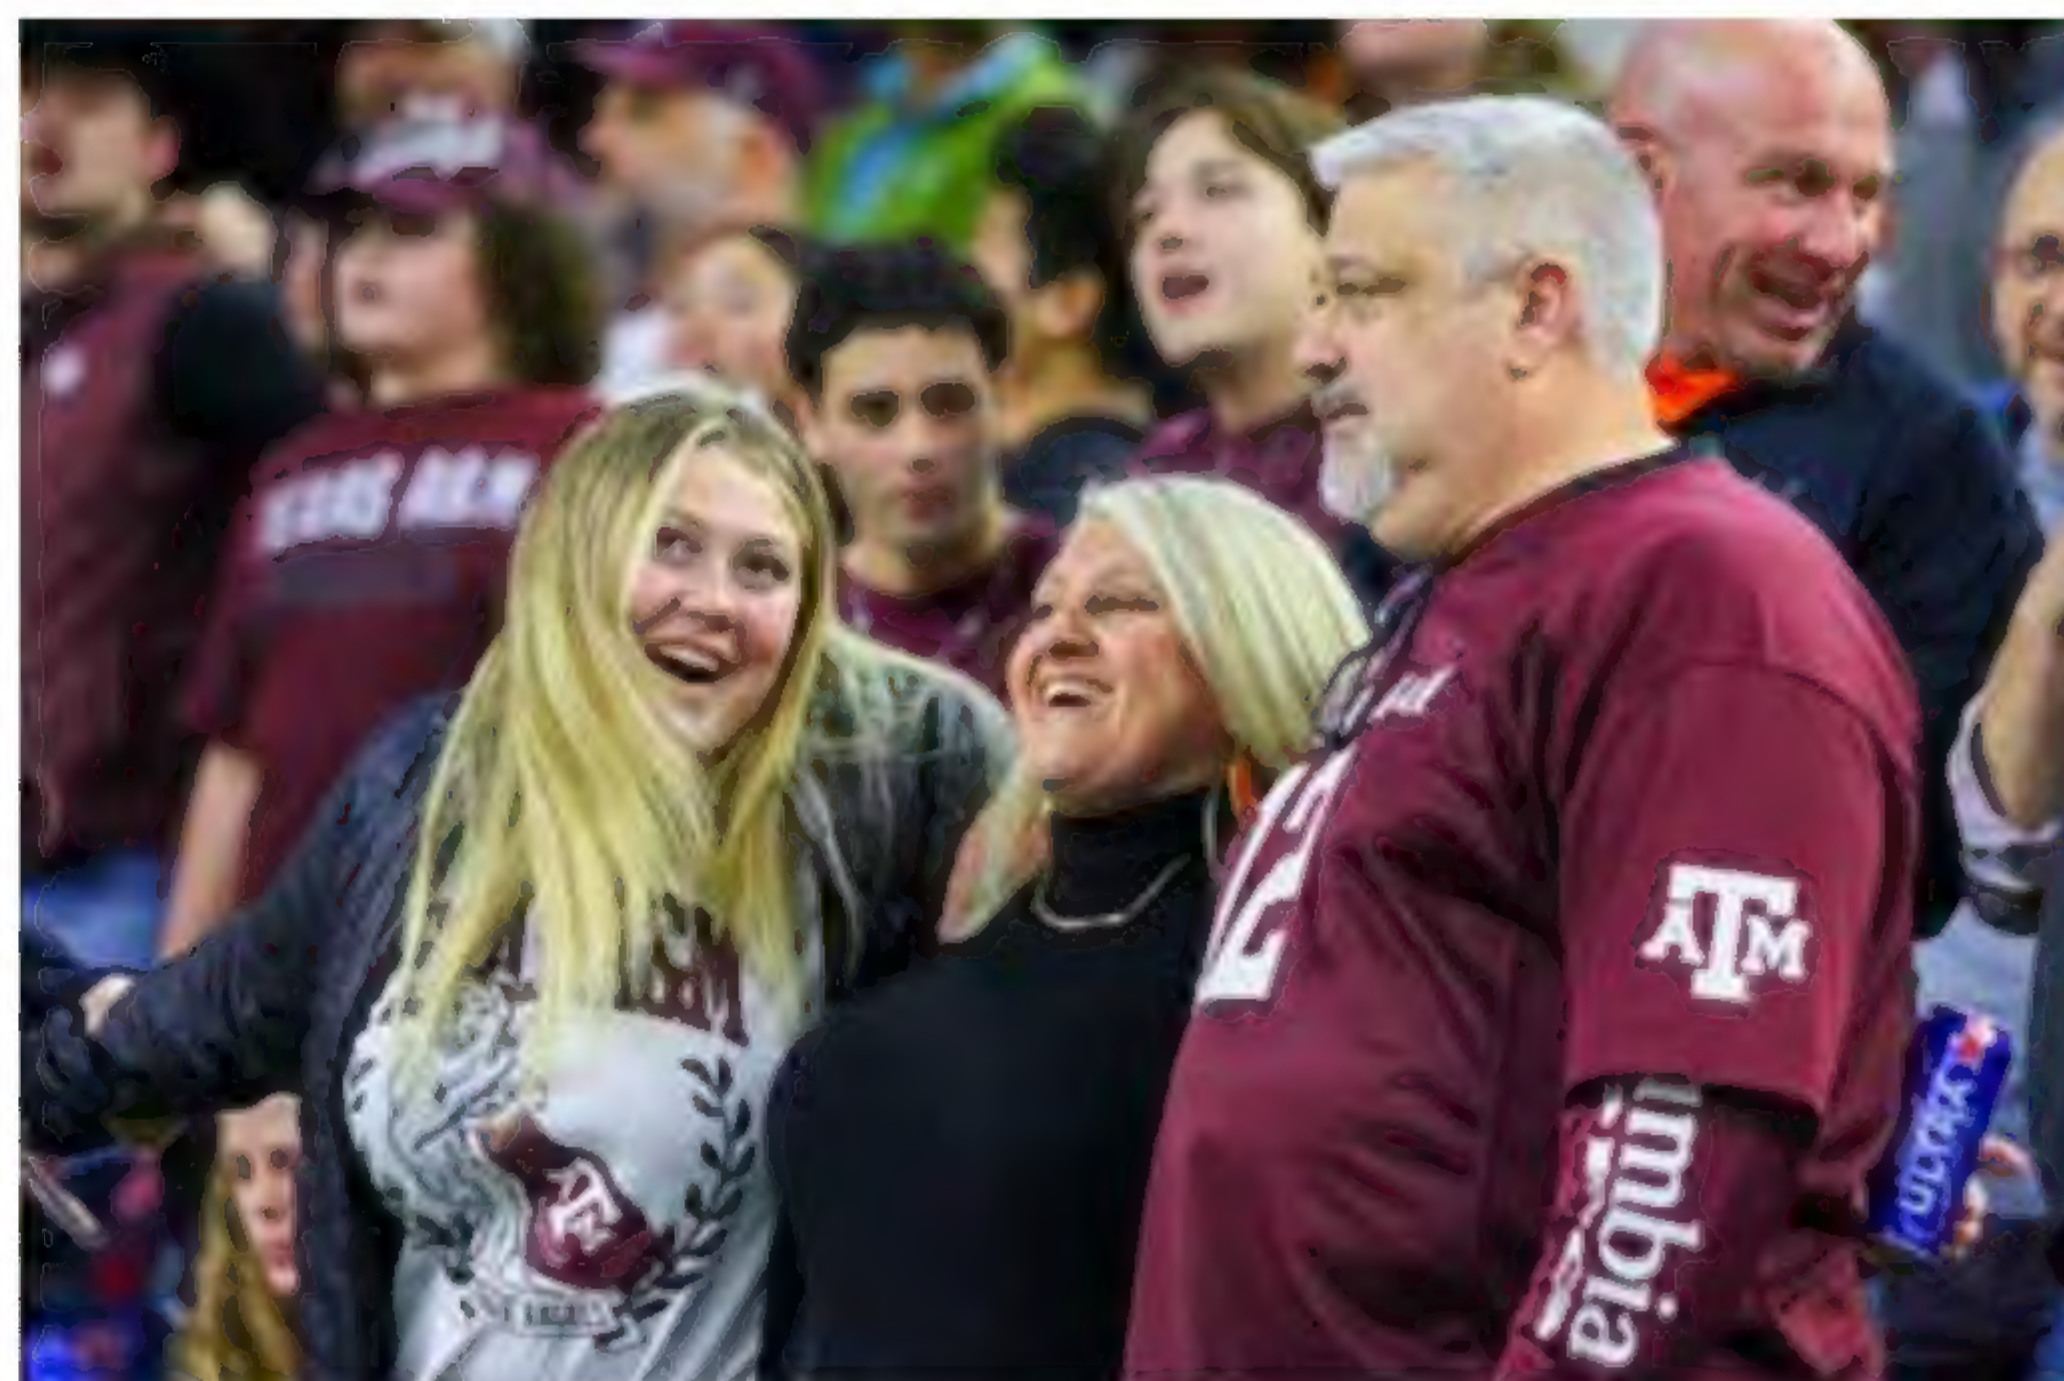

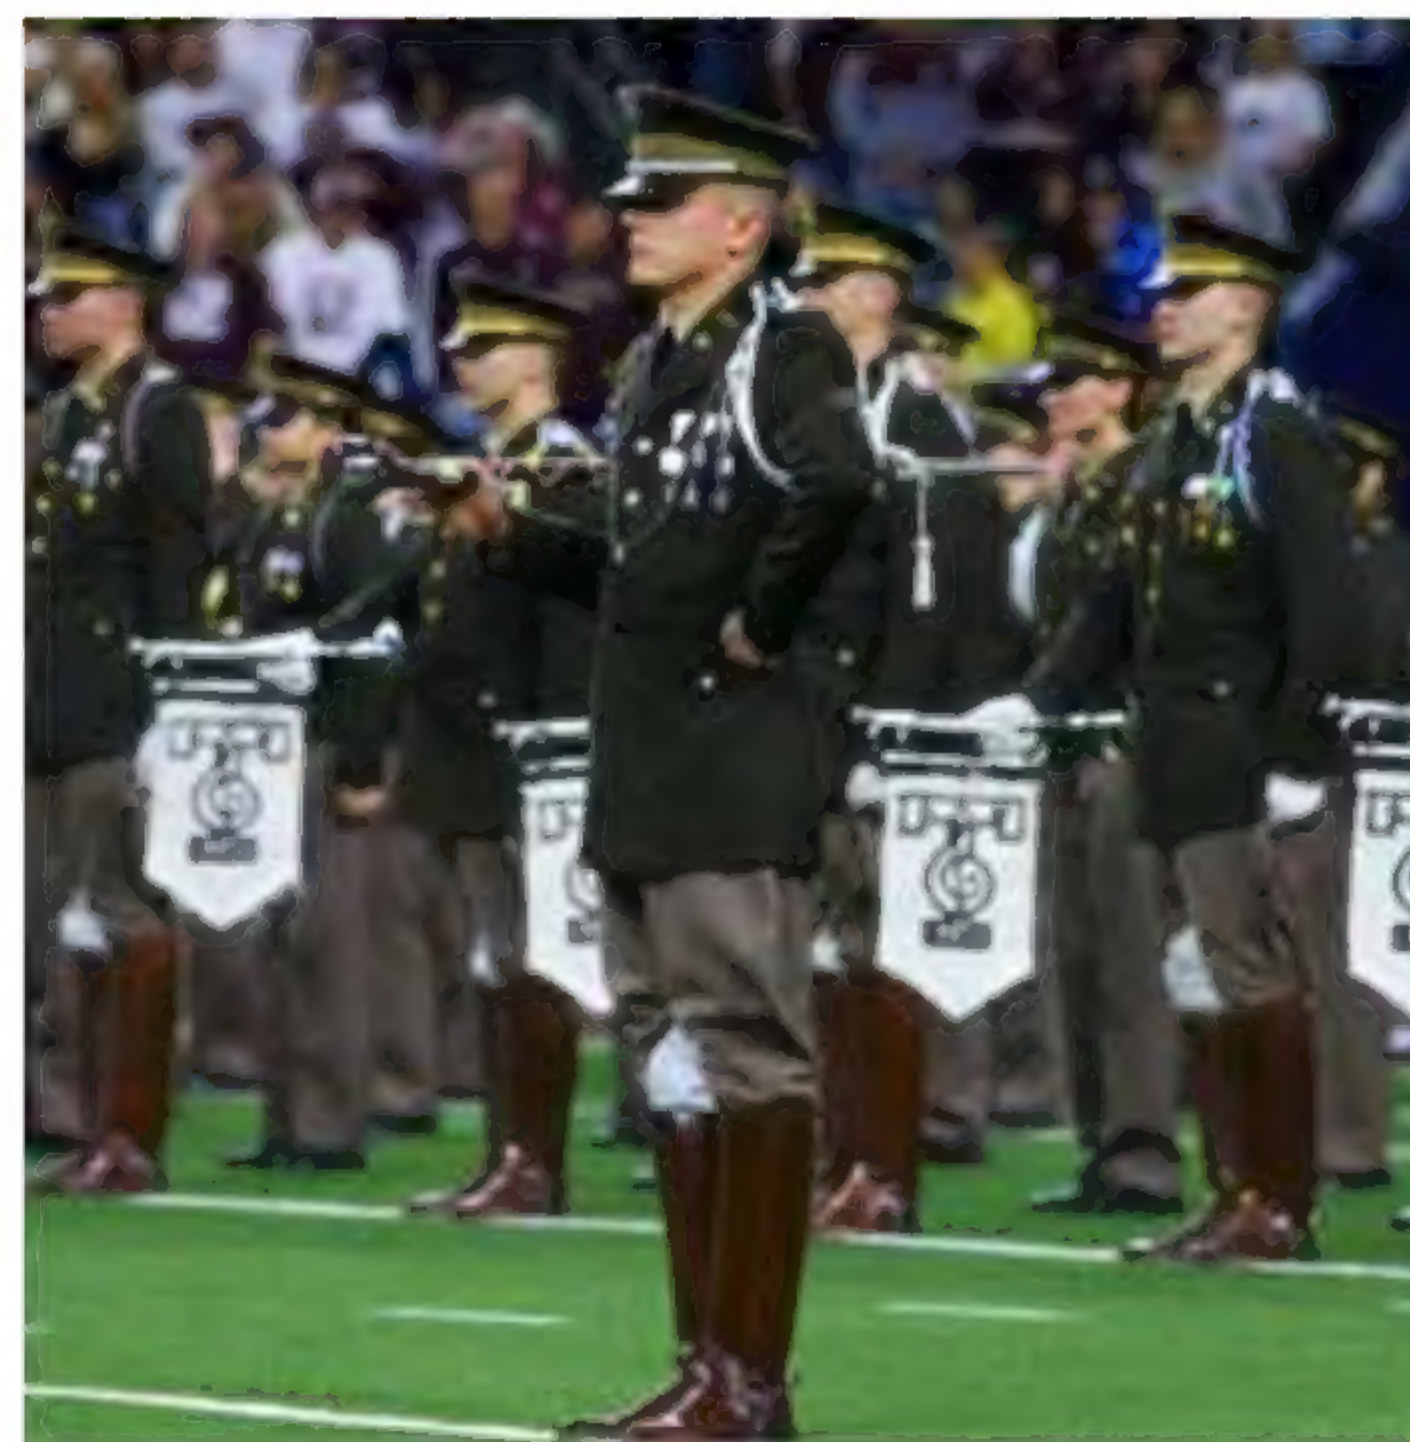

The team's main rivals on the diamond are Texas, LSU, and SMU. The Aggies take on the Horns April 20-21, and the team is looking forward to hosting the series this spring. We asked Conquest what his favorite memory was of being a part of the team and he told us, "Best moment since I've been on the team is hitting a walk-off to beat Texas in one of our conference games last year."

The Aggies are looking forward to continuing their conference dominance again this spring, but for Conquest, it's more than just playing baseball. He said "My favorite thing about being on the team is the brotherhood I've established with the other guys on the team. Also being blessed enough to play competitive baseball at a high level when I thought I would be done forever after high school."

If you want to cheer on our club baseball team check out their spring schedule at <https://www.tamuclubbaseball.org/> Grab some peanuts and Cracker Jacks and root, root, root for the Aggies!
